Because of love, God necessarily provides freedom/agency to creatures, and God works by empowering and inspiring creation toward well-being. God also necessarily upholds the regularities of the universe because those regularities derive from God's eternal nature of love (p. 94). He describes this model as "essential kenosis."

The uncontrolling love of God stands in stark contrast to that of a sovereign ruler. God cannot unilaterally decide on the exception. Hence, the exception is not a space domination, but negotiation. As Giorgio Agamben has pointed out about the "state of exception," essential kenosis will foster the dynamic of biopolitical engagement.
